Downtown Upland...

survival has been a

Upland's downtown has survived a David vs. Goliath battle, wielding its own quaint, small-scale weapon.

The Gazebo (above), at the junction of Ninth Street and Second Avenue, is downtown's focal point. Lou Ann Helmick and Deloris Billington (right) run a tiny downtown luncheonette. On the cover: Leah Selk, 83, grapples with stiff canvas she sewes into awnings at a downtown window shade store.

Pushed by the spectre of the sprawling, air-conditioned Montclair Plaza, Upland merchants sprang to defend themselves before the mall opened in 1968.

Like most downtowns, Upland's life-blood pumped on railroads, citrus and provincial home-town clientele. But anemia set in with the onset of Foothill Boulevard strip development and competing regional centers.

The revitalizing prescription — paid for by Upland merchants, landlords and from city street funds — was to add some character to a traditional-looking downtown but without duplicating the Plaza's cookie-cutter sameness.

The solution evolved during a year of Monday meetings and hand-wringing over various remedies.

Upland landscape architect Paul Hershey found the key: to create a garden look in keeping with Upland's horticulture showcase — Euclid Avenue.

Fourteen years later, the idea doesn't seem so astonishing. But it predates California's love-affair with philodendron-tangled bars and palm-filled shopping center atriums.

The face-lift's ingredients were median parking for customers and back street spaces for employees, trees and planters, brick paving stones for texture, streetlamps, and a central garden gazebo.

"We've felt that it made the difference between survival and not surviving. We are one of the few original town areas that has remained a viable business district," said Jack Atwood, owner of Atwood's department store. His is one of the few original businesses left, and began as a dry goods store opened in 1913 by Atwood's great-grandfather.

Downtown has a little of everything.

The city hall complex anchors the north. Jewelry stores, a book nook, antique shops and a beer hall keep company with two barber shops, a bakery and a bank.

The downtown has withstood some significant losses.

The brick five-and-dime was lost to condemnation. The Victorian-style Upland Inn was consumed by fire. A sporting goods store and meat counter were lured to other shopping centers. And the crumbling, art deco Grove Theatre now shows only Spanish-language films.

The void left by Mac the Medicine Man probably is the greatest nostalgic loss. Upland's first mayor, P.H. McQuillen, the town druggist and town character, retired and sold his corner drug store — a fountain where everyone gathered.

It's now where Atwood's men shop is.

Today, with its focal point at Ninth Street and Second Avenue, downtown faces another Goliath — economic doldrums that have depressed sales and increased vacancies in the downtown buildings.

Merchants must now wait for an economic turnaround before renovating facades, Atwood said. The plans include installing mansards with a unified theme.

The downtown merchant association is still active, but now takes up the task of promotion, staging sidewalk sales, art fairs and parades, and protectively screening prospective tenants. Their recommendations are given weight at City Hall, and their disapproval kept out a game arcade, Atwood said.

"It's a quaint, unique environment and gives a feeling of caring. If they (merchants) weren't so caring, it could slide pretty easily," city planning director Bill Young observed.

A diverse group of shop owners add their own special leaven to downtown's vitality.

Seemingly frozen in time, the Village Sandwich Shop is that lost luncheonette from another era, as warm and comforting as a cup of tea on a damp day.

It had an earlier life as The Donut Shop.

After the druggist's fountain went the way of bottled milk, the gathering spot moved across the street. Everyone left their coffee cups on the shop shelves — numbering 72 when the shop closed.

Deloris Billington made doughnuts every morning in the window. She drew the attention of children trekking to school.

an uphill battle

Making doughnuts was tricky. "I hated them," she said. "I had to weigh the flour and the water just right or the doughnuts would be cockeyed.

"I was so thrilled to see that machine go," she said.

After successive changes in ownership, and a gradual downhill slide, it was purchased by Rose Helmick nine years ago.

Her daughter, Lou Ann, and Billington now take orders from customers seated at the tiny frosted-glass tables and long Formica counter.

"Her mother came in to see if I worked hard," said Billington. "I went as one of the old fixtures."

The narrow, sunny diner was revamped with yellow-floral wall paper and baskets of plastic flowers.

A half-sandwich and fragrant cup of home-made soup costs $1.95.

The two women know everybody by name and even know their tastes.

When the dentist pulls up, a daily visit since 1967, they toss on a hamburger, always topped with cheese.

"Fast Mary" eats lickety-split. The toast lady always munches on bread. The chicken lady owns a poultry ranch.

Nathan and Leah Selk are also remnants from another era.

They have made awnings and sold linoleum in their floor and window shade shop since 1948, having started their business 24 years before in Ontario.

They couldn't get supplies during the war, when textile, rubber and cork supplies were diverted for the war effort.

"Everything was frozen. Nobody had," said Mr. Selk, through a still-thick Russian accent.

The Selks immigrated in the early 20s from Vitebsk, a city of 230,000 near the Russian capital.

"We didn't like it when the communists took over," said the 83-year-old great-grandmother, who left her parents behind and lived in a sister's home in Pennsylvania.

"I'm thankful to be here, but regretful the rest didn't come," she said.

Today their customers are mostly the older people who have known the Selks for years.

"I don't notice the difference," Mrs. Selk said, although some customers now prefer plastic shades.

"Pop still prefers canvas," she said affectionately.

Their shop hasn't been remodeled since the 40s. A dusty forest of linoleum rolls stand upright against the walls, some of the cubist patterns predating World War II.

"If I take it to a Beverly Hills auction house," Mr. Selk said, he could make more money on one roll than he paid for the whole lot.

Both in their 80s, they leave installations to their 29-year-old son.

Mrs. Selk, a tiny, frail babushka, still fashions canvas into awnings on one of three old black sewing machines in a small production room off the main storefront.

"I like to sew, to take materials and put them together and it's nice and people want it," she said.

"We had problems during the Depression. There are days when you are not so happy," she said, opening her hands as if to say, "What can you do?"

"If you are good to people, that's all that matters."

Upland Bakery is possibly the oldest continuing business downtown, dating back to turn-of-the-century. Irene and Albert Luethold bought the downtown...

The nose-tickling fragrance of fresh baked goods pervades the shop like no market bakery section can.

Bakers start their day at 1 a.m., selecting ingrediants to whip up 25 types of bread each day, dropping an equal number of different types of cookies, cakes and luscious creme-filled pastry such as Napoleons and Italian cannolis.

Four-thousand pounds of flour are used each month.

"Sometimes a lady who is baking will call up and ask what went wrong," Mrs. Luethold said, one of the services she can offer that a grocery store bakery won't bother with.

"We try to help people with requests and be friendly," she said.

Mr. Luethold, 58, the chief baker, has been baking bread and making rose swirls for 35 years, serving his apprenticeship to a Swiss baker in Michigan.

Born in Lucerne, he comes from a family of bakers. "I learned fast," he said.

Upland Feed and Fuel is second only to Atwood's as downtown's most stable and greatest customer draw.

In the early 1900s, it was a livery stable.

Later it was a packing house, a budget furniture shop and then a livestock feed store. Behind the alley, was a mill to grind soybean meal and molasses into poultry feed.

As development squeezed out the poultry industry, chicken ranches migrated east and the milling operations followed. Upland Feed and Fuel's mill is now in Redlands.

From the brick warehouse topped with a wood-plank roof, still scorched from a fire, owner Ray Stump sells hay bales to horse owners and 50-pound sacks of dog food to pet owners.

The retail store looks much like an all-purpose pet store, stocking bird cages and fish tanks. □ bakery in 1973. It had changed hands at least seven times since 1906, and was probably best known as Danner's Bakery, owned by Clyde Danner between 1919-49.

In the old brick oven where Danner did his baking, loaves were pushed inside on flat hearth peels.

It was replaced with a giant gas oven that holds 256 loaves, baking on eight revolving shelves.

PAWS fights for animals

Marian Cochran
Member
Promote Animal Welfare and Safety

In 1982 our organization PAWS (Promote Animal Welfare and Safety) decided to ask the residents of Upland for help and to make them aware of the inadequacy in the size of their animal shelter in Upland. We were sure the problem was that most residents were not aware of how small the shelter was and the need for equipment to maintain it.

I approached large contracting firms and other businesses that have made sizeable fortunes in Upland thinking they would want to put something back into the community that serves a large percentage of the residents. In many cases I could not even get a courtesy interview. We wrote letters and called several organizations. Several replies were that our project did not fit their fundraising image. Mrs. Joy Harvey, also of Upland, and I talked with local service organizations. We prin'ed flyers and distributed them.

Our successes have been small but have made a difference at the shelter. Frank Carpenter, Upland City Councilman and member of the Upland Lunch Kiwanis, has befriended our organization and the shelter. He has taken the time to investigate the needs at the shelter. When the gas main broke this winter during two weeks of cold rain, Carpenter and his wife Dee cut red tape and the repairs were done. Due to his efforts, cat cages will be added, thus eliminating the problem of kittens falling into the dog cages. Hot water is being installed due to his efforts thus making cleaning easier for the Animal Control Officers.

Donald Maroney of the law firm Maroney, Demchuk, Brandt and Krueger of Upland came to our aid in acquiring a nonprofit status for a PAWS after an unsuccessful two year effort in finding legal assistance.

Upland Lumber, Rugg Lumber and Harvey's Paint made it possible to replace the worn out pallets the dogs sit on to stay dry and warm. The Upland Breakfast Lions will erect a much needed sign at the shelter. Jim Felix of Ontario Neon Sign and the Upland Architectural Commission generously prepared the plan for the sign. Ray Stump of Upland Feed and Fuel, has been a long standing friend of PAWS and has assisted with our efforts numerous times.

We received several donations from local residents (including some from Ontario, Alta Loma and Fontana) and items were donated for a garage sale that was held to raise funds. The fund were used to buy new food dishes, replacing the bread pans that were being used. Six out of 17 automatic waterers were bought. Minimun state tax and filing fees were paid and a token amount went to Maroney's law firm for their invaluable services. Contributions left over went toward the $30-a-week cost, which PAWS members have provided over the years for the weekly news ads listing the pets available for adoption.

Without the ads there would be no adoption program.

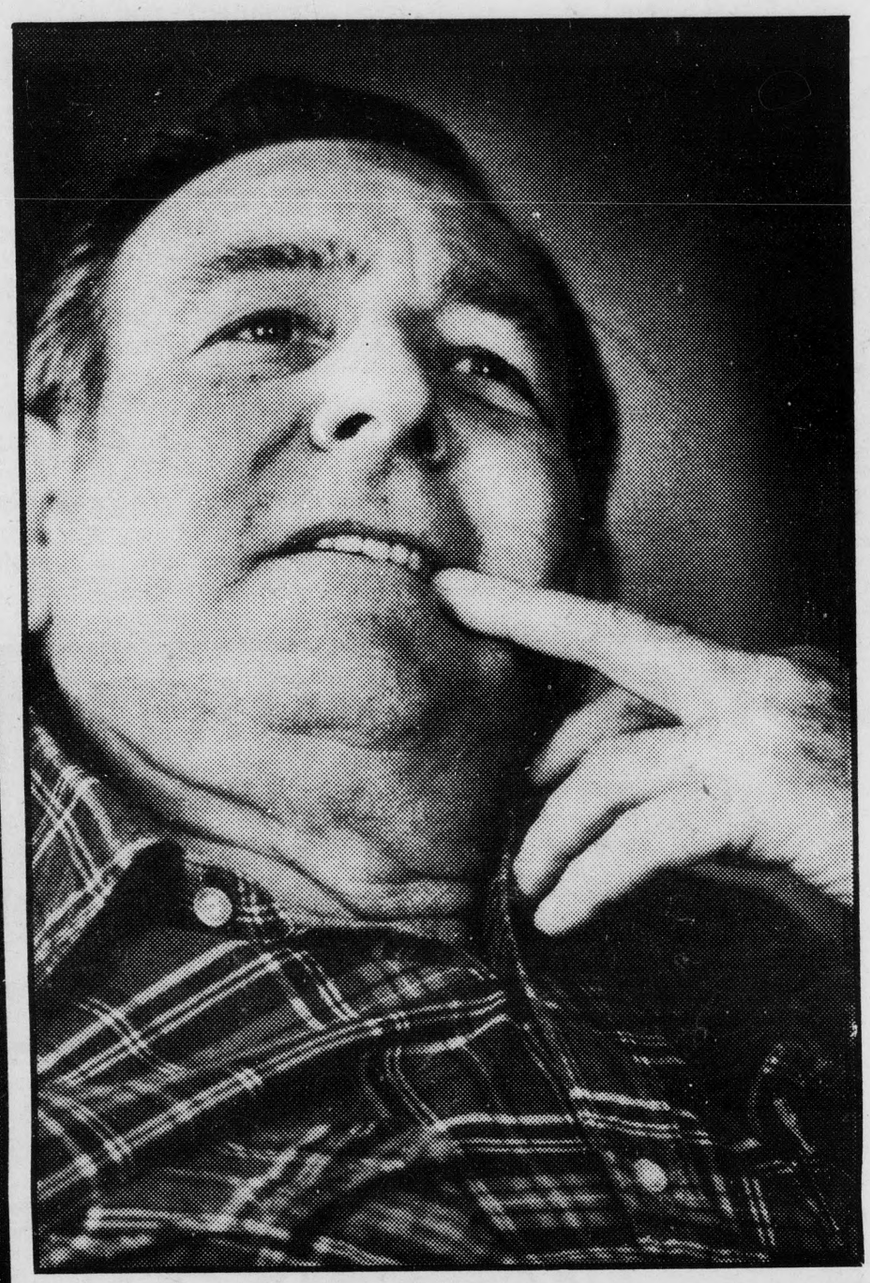
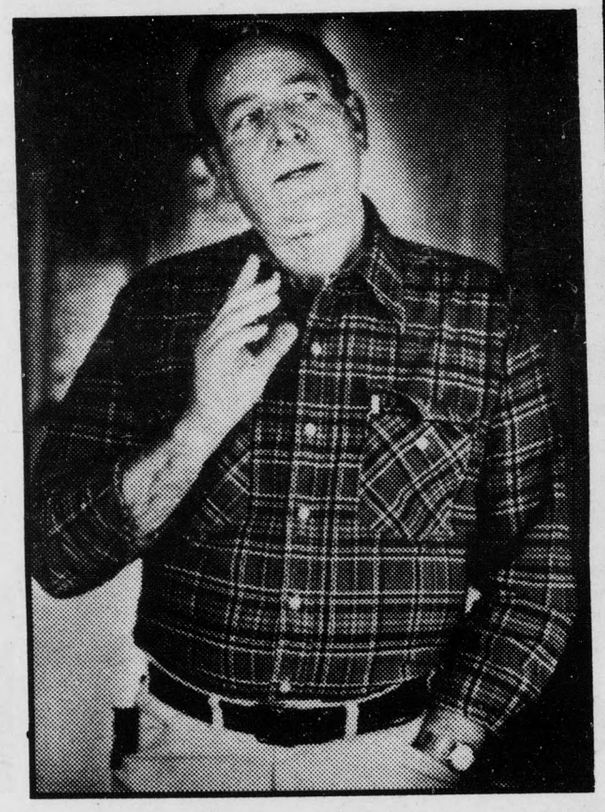
THE MAYOR





Mayor John McCarthy is trying to kick the nicotine habit.

McCarthy says he made the decision after being confronted with his own mortality, reflected in the face of his dying mother-in-law, hooked to an oxygen bottle for life-sustaining breath.

Repulsed and revolted with the result of a self-destructive habit, McCarthy resolved three weeks ago to quit smoking.

Quitting cold-turkey is no easier for him than for the heroin users and alcoholics he observed and sympathized with as a patrolman on the city police force.

"I wasn't willing to accept physically what it was doing to me," said McCarthy, 65, who smoked at least two packs of filter-tipped cigarettes a day for 45 years.

He was shocked and galvanized by the consequences, seeing Loretta Dean, 81, a smoker all her life, withering with congestive heart failure.

"I hope and pray to beat the darn thing," he said, adding that three smokeless weeks are less than convincing proof.

They have been miserable, fidgety weeks.

"I have five children and all of them smoke," McCarthy added.

"I think they will all look towards me and say 'it hasn't harmed him.' But I would like to set the example before it harms their health.

"I hope I haven't waited too long."

The barrel-chested politician with turquoise-colored eyes and a Ronald Reagan-style haircut, doesn't have a rattling cough. But in the last year, McCarthy felt short of breath after mowing the lawn around his home in the city's southeastern section.

"It's never too late," according to Dr. Fouad D. Tawadrous, chief of respiratory therapy at San Antonio Community Hospital, and Mrs. Dean's physician.

Besides inducing cancer, the chemical agents in tobacco smoke inhibit the function of cilia inside the lung. Congestion is the result.

That symptom usually can be reversed by quitting, Tawadrous said. Usually not reversible are the effects of emphysema, progressive suffocation when lungs lose their ability to take up oxygen.

Tawadrous said only the determined sever their dependence and suppress cravings for a lungful of acrid smoke in the first 14 smokeless days, when an ex-smoker will experience the physical symptoms of withdrawal.

"After that you have to fight the habit. It depends on determination and good planning," the doctor said.

McCarthy said he tried to quit three years ago. His wife, Eileen, didn't join his crusade nor did he avoid social situations, such as cocktail parties, where old habits and the aroma of smoke create an irresistable urge.

Before going out, McCarthy would check his supply and feel for a pack in a shirt or jacket pocket. "It was fear of running out, of perhaps being in the position of not having any cigarettes."

By his own admission, McCarthy said he disdained from using pain-reducing, addictive drugs, prescribed for his frequent discomfort from a hip injury, but never applied the same philosophy to cigarettes.

McCarthy was elected to the Council in 1970, after retiring from the police force a captain, and ran for mayor in 1980. An old injury, suffered in a hot pursuit and aggravated later by a fall, forced him to retire.

"It's amazing what you can learn to live with," he said, but said this time, if he is in danger of losing his resolve, he will seek professional help.

He recalls first lighting up at 14, but didn't smoke steadily until four years later.

At All Hallows Institute in New York City's Bronx borough, the brothers of the Irish Christian religious order allowed the older class to smoke.

"Nobody said it was a sin. Today they will tell you it's not right, because it's self-destructive," he said.

In his lifetime, church philosophy has gradually changed to regard heavy cigarette consumption as no different than gluttony, considered a sin in Catholic dogma.

"I grew up at a time when smoking was fashionable," McCarthy said.

"If I knew what the effects could have been ... Then there was no warning. Almost everybody did it."

Today, the research damning tobacco is overwheiming, but 32 percent of the U.S. population still smoke.

Those who inhale more than two packs-a-day have a mortality rate of 15 to 25 percent greater than non-smokers, said Bill Littlejohn of the American Cancer Society in Pasadena.

Five percent of the all deaths in the U.S. are caused by lung cancer, and nearly all of that cancer is induced by smoking, Littlejohn said.

Cries for help answered at WETAS

By Joy Sommer

For Mitzi Pollard, director of West End Toxic Abuse Service (WETAS), substance abuse and their consequences are a life's work.

"I'm a recovered alcoholic myself and I know what substance abuse can do to a person. I lost my home, my car, my very identity," she said.

Pollard's husband Jim founded WETAS about nine years ago and it is now in its third location, 414 E. Ninth St., Upland.

As director of WETAS, Pollard sees many women and men like herself. The majority are sent by the courts as part of their sentence after conviction of Driving Under the Influence (DUI). Some are referred by other agencies or individuals but one thing they all have in common is a problem with chemical dependency.

The facility, along with several others in the West End, serves the needs of those battling chemical dependency or problems.

"We primarily deal in educating people about what the alcohol and other substances can do to them," she said.

WETAS differs from similar facilities in that a woman serves as director and many of the programs have been developed with the female abuser in mind.

"Not that we neglect the needs of the males in the program, it's just the atmosphere is different," she said.

The Level 1 offenders are those who have been convicted for the first times for driving under the influence. Level 1 offenders go through a 16-hour, 12-meeting program.

The Level 2 offenders have been convicted more than once and are placed in a variable length program.

Pollard noted that looking for the right place to go when you or a loved one is has become chemical dependent can be frustrating.

"There is something for everyone, it's just a matter of finding the correct place," she said.

WETAS offers referrals to both inpatient and outpatient care facilities. WETAS can be reached by calling 985-2785. □

When Joy Harvey and Peggy Adkins visit the shelter twice a week to make a list of pets available, each face they see becomes individual. Those friendly, individual faces have been the incentive for them, along with Shirley Miraldi of Etiwanda, to take calls seven days-a-week in hopes of finding families or individuals that are looking for a pet.

Unfortunately, they also remember the faces of those that don't make it out each week.

In the U.S. there are more household pets than any country in the world. More money is spent on pet food and supplies than many countries spend on food.

We do wonder about the communities priorities when only a few seem to take interest in the overflow of pets dumped into the shelter because of neglect, abuse and overbreeding.

We are grateful to those individuals that could look past their own interests and give a helping hand to the strays — the leftovers.

Neighbors in the news

John Zens has received "highest honors" for his academic achievements during the fall semester at San Berardino Valley College. Zens earned a 3.9 to 4.0 grade point average in all his work in the administration of justice program.

Melanie Komendat has been promoted to assistant to the president at the College of Osteopathic Medicine of the Pacific. Her primary area of responsibility will be with the college's recently launched $5.5 million, five-year capital campaign, "Building the Bridge to the Future."

Lori Crockett, a sophomore engineering major at Harvey Mudd College, has been selected to participate in a special physics forum at the college. The forum will be led by Richard Garwin, recipient of Mudd's Wright Prize for interdisciplinary scientific achievement for 1983.

Stacie Ann Beaman, Upland, has been selected as a competing finalist for the 1983 Miss Teenage California pageant on April 9-10 at the Park Center Plaza Inn in San Jose.

She will be competing for $5,000 in prizes and a chance to advance to the national finals in New York. She is sponsored by Sunshine Fashions of Alta Loma, Judy Beaman, Upland, and Harvey Beaman, Covina.

Fifteen Upland residents were named to the Dean's Honor List at Mt. San Antonio College for the Fall semester.

Students making the Honor List were required to carry at least 12 units and maintain at least a 3.0 or B average.

On the list were: Blake Bushman, Dwayne C. Davis, Anthony DeGruccio, Judie Lyons, Nancy Marrs, Katherine Paprocki, Robert Rallo, Cynthia Ressler, Sharon Simoni, Cheryl Skousen, Jill Thomas, April Warian, Dana Warn, Mark Zinda and Mike Zinda.

David Harryman, manager of the Upland office of Herbert Hawkins, reports his real estate office was named number two in sales volume with $15.1 million in the eastern division of the company.

Pvt. Richard Woolridge, son of Barbara Jeter and stepson of Charlie Jeter, Upland, has completed basic training at Fort Dix, N.J. Jeter is a 1982 graduate of Chaffey High School.

Airman James Sargeant, son of James and Patricia Sargeant, Upland, has been assigned to Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas, after completing Air Force basic training.

During the six weeks at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, he studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations. He will now receive specialized instruction in the wire maintenance field.

He is a 1979 graduate of Chaffey High School.

Heavenly Houses

Worshipers gather this Easter Sunday in heavenly houses, designed by mortals with beautiful lines and shapes to inspire faith.

Two of the most striking churches in the area span a century in architectural thinking.

The Roman Catholic St. Joseph's Church in Upland was dedicated in 1979. In 1907, field stones lugged from the foothills in wagons formed the walls of Cucamonga United Methodist, which began in 1884.

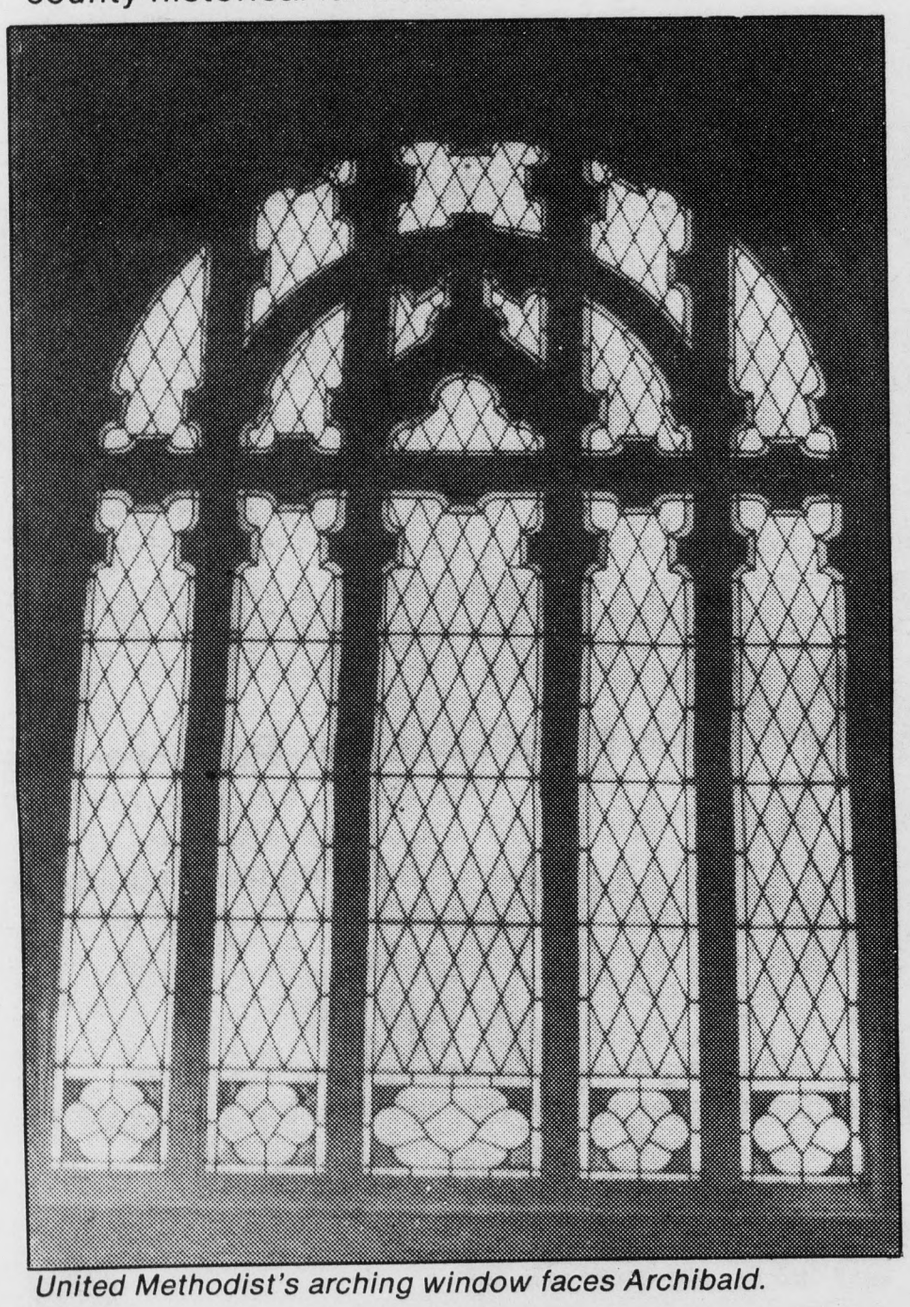
The stone church is home to 275 parishioners and is a county historical landmark.

A beveled glass window facing Archibald Avenue is at the sanctuary's rear, added later as a memorial, the Rev. Glen Larsen said.

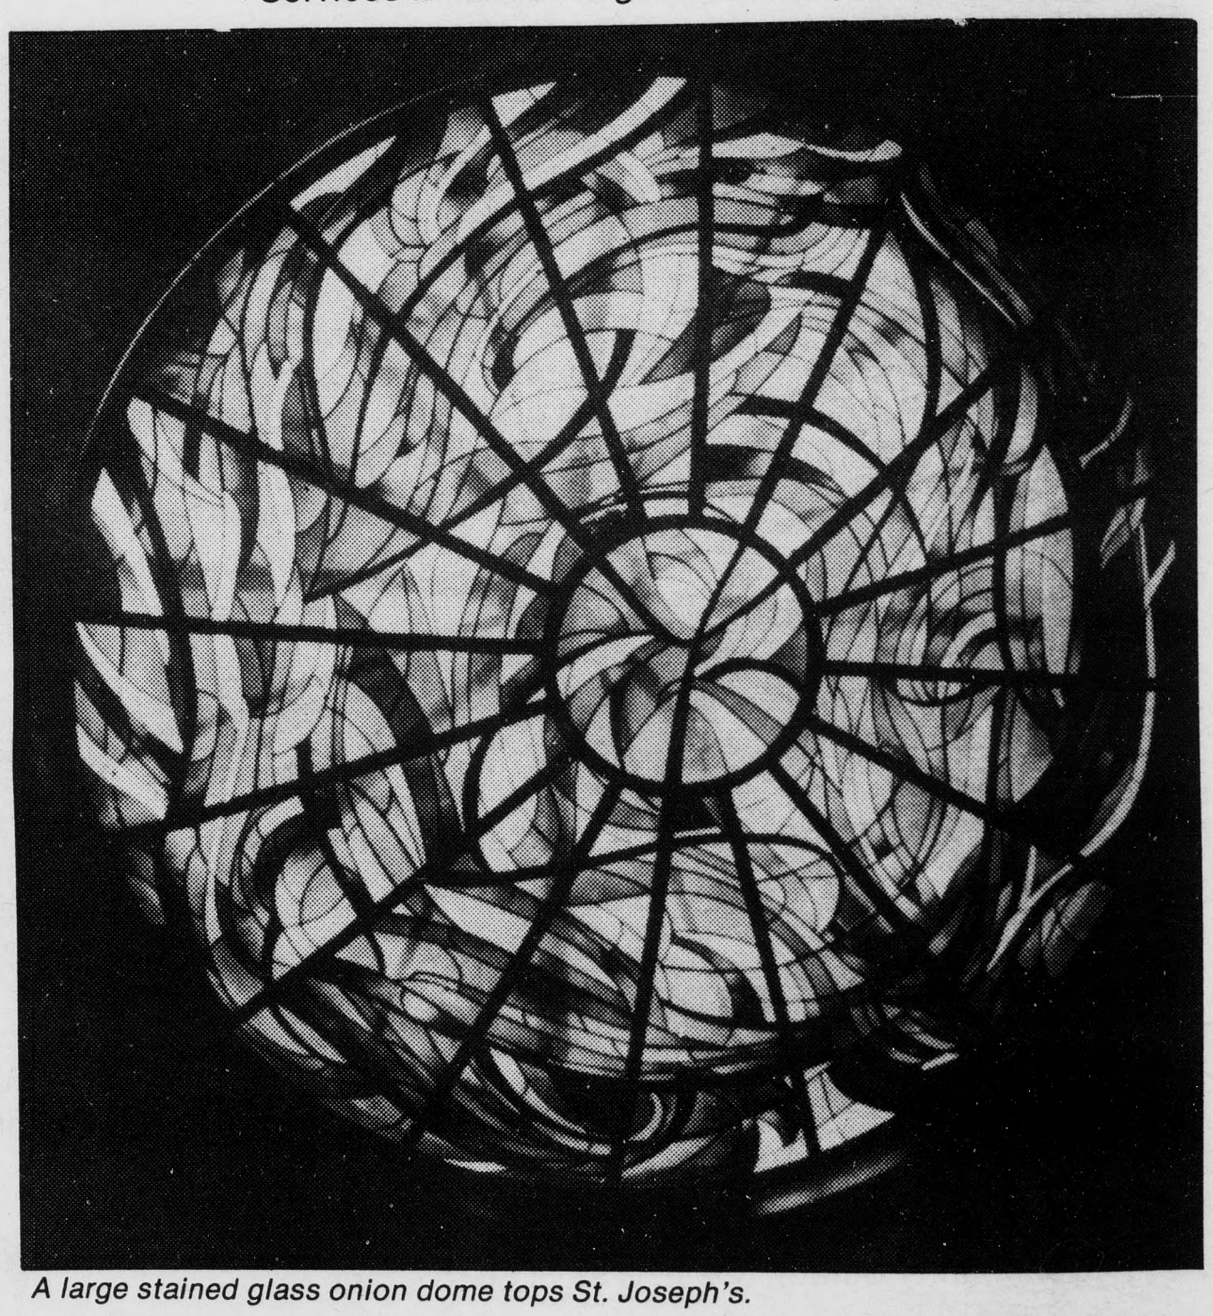
Russian churches were the inspiration for St. Joseph's modern sanctuary, built beside the original church on Campus Avenue, now used as a hall. Its $1 million cost was financed by the 1,800 families of the congregation.

Easter services begin at St. Joseph's at the Saturday 7 p.m. vigil, and continue Sunday with services at 7:30, 9, 10:30 and noon.

Services in Cucamonga are Sunday at 9 and 10:30 a.m.



United Methodist's arching window faces Archibald.



A large stained glass onion dome tops St. Joseph's.

The modern arching leaded glass windows, in the back of the sanctuary, are the work of Jos Maes of Laguna Beach.

Russian influence is evident in the church's design, by La Jolla architect Joseph Damron.

By Ron Witt

Bill Matreyek likes to say he lives by an uncomplicated credo.

"If you're going to do something," says the noted Upland home builder and golf enthusiast, "do it right. It's attention to details that's important, and that's true in any line of work."

One look at Matreyek's lavish new Upland Hills Country Club development on Baseline Road in Upland should convince any skeptics that the man has lived up to his espoused philosophy.

In a joint business venture with Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., Matreyek has turned a 226-acre site of rock and gravel into an eye-pleasing, sparkling place to play and live.

Thousands of tons of rock, some of it hand-picked, had to be removed and an equal amount of top soil moved in to complete the transformation of the area.

Indeed, it now appears an attractive place to reside, and approximately half of the 102 two- and three-bedroom condominium homes constructed (out of a planned 547), all of them featuring fairway frontage, are already filled with tenants.

But the best news for area golfers is that Upland Hills Country Club is not a private course but a public one.

And, providing that recent damaging rains relent, the near 6,000-yard, par 70 course should be open for play in early June.

"It'll probably be on a Sunday or whichever day's most convenient," enthuses the 64-year-old Matreyek of the anticipated grand opening.

"We'll have a big bash to celebrate. I want people to feel good when they come here."

Fairways and greens are carefully manicured and should mature further as spring progresses, although the layout doesn't figure to reach its top condition until October.

(Concluded on page 15)

There's birdies in them thar' Hills

The 18-hole course, which features eight lakes (with fountains), sand traps and a variety of trees (including some palms from the defunct Ontario Motor Speedway site), is divided into two portions.

Eleven of the holes are situated north of Baseline Road, and the other seven lie south of the same busy thoroughfare that runs between Upland and Rancho Cucamonga. A tunnel large enough to accommodate golf cart and walk-through traffic connects the two playing sites.

In deference to retaining beauty of the course, no high nettings have been built along Baseline Road to catch errant golf balls.

"We've placed tees and greens in fairly safe positions," explains Matreyek, who has been a golfer since the age of 11 and is a playing member at Red Hills Country Club in Rancho Cucamonga.

A work force of 18 people is currently grooming and repairing various portions of the course. Proving especially difficult have been three holes which washed out three different times by the rain.

The Upland Hills course was designed by Orange County course architect David Rainville, who calls it "very sporty."

"It's not a long course," says Rainville. "The emphasis will be on shot-making. But neither is it an executive course (there are two par 5's). The holes are regulation."

The ninth and 18th holes should present real challenges to golfers, adds the designer.

"Both finishing holes could make or break some rounds," he predicts. "You could have some good scores up to that point go down the tubes."

Rainville, who calls the course "a touch of Palm Springs in Upland," says he is "delighted" with the layout as it has evolved.

"Bill (Matreyek) has allowed us to do what needed to be done. He said, 'Let's build a first class golf course,' and I think we have. It's one of the best around, including Orange County.

"It should attract a tremendous amount of play, and I hope people enjoy themselves. The course has a lot going for it."

Hearing Loss Is Not A Sign Of Old Age.

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

Send for this model, put it on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. While many people with a hearing loss will not receive any significant benefit from any hearing aid, this free model will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It is not a real hearing aid, and it's yours to keep free. The actual aid weighs less than a fourth of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation, your authorized dealer may call. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 50067, Beltone Electronics Corp., 4201 W. Victoria, Chicago, Illinois 60646.

Cage winners

Dave Ponder (varsity), Nino Quinteollo (junior varsity), John Saunders (sophomore) and Jamie McMahon (freshman) were each named Most Valuable Players of their respective teams at the recent Upland High School basketball awards night.

Ronn McMahon, a 5-7 guard who led the Scots in assists (8.4 per game) as well as scoring 13 points a contest, shared the varsity team's hustle award with backcourt mate Tyrone Knott.

Other varsity award winners included Pierre King (also chosen most inspirational) and Bill Windhorn as the most improved. Knott and Ponder, who served as co-captain's on Paul Trautwein's 11-14 squad, were also singled out for their defensive play and shared the free throw award. John Temple earned practice free throw shooting honors.

For coach Jerry Cobb's jayvee team (which finished 5-9 in Baseline League play), Quintello earned the MVP trophy as well as the hustle award.

Darren Madkin garnered both free throw and practice free throw honors, while Paul Harris and Reggie Miller were named most improved. Mike Abary and Sidney Suarez served as co-captains.

The sophomore squad, coached by Keevan Humphrey, saw Saunders earn MVP and free throws honors, as well as serving as team co-captain with Steve Drest.

Facelift reflects changing direction for News

The Upland News has recently undergone a facelift that reflects a major change in its focus. The weekly newspaper has served Upland for 89 years and now proudly offers readers a closer look at what residents are doing and services available in the city.

Regular features include an eight-day calendar of events, Upland sports coverage and stories about the folks who live and work in the city. The Viewpoint section offers readers an opportunity to "tell it like it is," giving their opinions about Upland, its past and the direction it is going.

The Upland News will be delivered each Thursday as a supplement to The Daily Report, San Bernardino County's largest evening newspaper, and will also be delivered to other residents.

Both the Upland News and The Daily Report are owned by the Donrey Media Group.

DRIVE THAT EXTRA MILE - WE'LL GO THAT EXTRA MILE FOR YOU!

Car issues warning to schoolchildren

By Joy Sommer

Although the topics vary — bike safety, child abuse, drug use — they all carry the same message from the Upland Police Department and the Upland School District ..."Be aware."

Upland PD, in cooperation with the district, presents a series of programs on an as-needed or as-requested basis to area schools.

"We make the programs available," said Upland Crime Prevention Officer Dick Noville. "It's up to the principals to decide what, if any, they want. I must admit, we do push bike safety and Casey, but with child and drug abuse, we aren't as insistent."

"Casey" is a talking car the department acquired about four years ago. "He's a big hit with the kids; they get a kick out of him," Noville said.

The officer who presents the program, usually Noville himself, talks about pedestrian safety, crossing streets, hints on riding bikes and trikes and then Casey reaffirms what the officer said.

"He talks about himself, that he has two badges (one on each door). He explains exactly what he does, how he helps the officer. Then he sounds all three of his sirens."

The car should be getting a new voice track soon, Noville said, because police plan to update it and change the routine slightly. The car is used strictly in the school program and was donated by Enterprise Chevrolet.

According to Noville, the bike program has been a fixture for some time. "We really push this one because it gives the kids a better chance to stay alive. It not only makes them safe riders it helps them when they become drivers."

The three-part program includes a slide presentation, a bike safety booklet and a rodeo held at the school.

The district has been very supportive of the program, Noville said, with many of the schools voluntarily supporting a policy of discouraging students in kindergarten through second grade from riding at all and encouraging those from third grade up to complete the program successfully before taking their bikes to school.

Upland Superintendent George Renworth said most of the schools go along with the policy. "Any time you have a uniform policy on campuses, it makes an impression. Accidents involving bikes used to and from school have been minimal," he said.

Taking another tack, the Police Department also offers the Skid program.

"This is a demonstration showing children how far a car will travel after the driver sees an emergency situation and applies the brakes.

"We show them how far the car travels after the brakes have been applied at various speeds. It gives them a better understanding of how much stopping room a car actually needs," Noville said.

The Drug program is presented to both elementary and junior high schools and involves a movie, discussion and a display of different drugs.

"We really need to get a new movie," Noville said, "The one we have is about 20 years old. We also plan to update the program.

Noville said with the younger children officers don't get too technical. Renworth agreed. "The earlier you start an education program on drug abuse, the better," he said. "Some kids have recognition as young as first and second grade ... you can't miss it, it's on TV, it's everywhere."

Both Noville and Renworth said they thought the attitude of parents about information programs like drug abuse has changed. "Parents want their children to be aware and programs like this allow them to learn about it — learn the facts without any distortion," Renworth said.

One of the newest of the programs aimed at schools is the Child Molest program. Noville said it has been offered for about three years.

A movie, "Better Safe Than Sorry," is shown and followed by a discussion with the officer.

Right now, the only plans they have are to improve the existing programs.

"We could be doing a rape prevention program in the junior high schools and we'd like to expand the drug program, as I said before, but the Chief (Coy Estes) feels it's better to get involved in fewer (programs) and do them well. It's better for us to do top quality programs that get the point across than just to offer a little bit of everything." □
